Heaven

“The following letter was received by a minister after he had announced that his sermon would be on Heaven. It is an encouraging and hopeful letter.

‘Next Sunday, you are to talk about Heaven. I am interested in that land because I have a clear title to a bit of property there, and have had it over fifty-five years. I didn’t buy it, it was given to me by the landlord.

The landlord bought it for me at a tremendous price. I don’t care to sell it. As a matter of fact, the title is non-transferable. It’s not just a vacant lot. For more than half a century I have been sending materials out of which the greatest architect and builder of the universe has been building a home for me. It will never need remodeling or repairing, for he has assured me that it will suit me perfectly, individually and will never grow old.

Termites can never undermine its foundations for they rest on the Rock of Ages. Fire cannot destroy it. Floods cannot wash it away. I’ll need no locks or bolts for no vicious person can ever enter the land where my home stands. My home is almost complete now, almost ready for me to move in. There I can live in peace eternally. I have no fear of being rejected.

There is a deep valley of shadows between the place where I now live and the place to which I am going. I cannot reach my home in that city without passing through this deep valley. I am not afraid, because my best friend, my future landlord, promised in printed form that he will never leave me alone. He has stuck by me through thick and thin since we became acquainted some fifty-five years ago. He will be with me as I walk this lonely valley so I shall not lose my way.

I hope to hear your sermon on Heaven next Sunday, but you see, I’m not sure I shall. But if I’m not there, you’ll know I’ve been called home.”
